PREFACE.

IN introducing a new publication into the field of Harvard journalism, the editors are sensible that they are entering upon ground in which the space is limited and already well occupied. They think, however, that they have found a corner which has not as yet been appropriated. Club life at Harvard is a cardinal feature of the college course; and yet even the members themselves are but slightly acquainted with the history of the organizations to which they belong. These past records are too rich in substance to be forgotten, and the HARVARD CLUB BOOK presents to its readers such summaries of these histories as are of most interest to the members of the clubs and to the college at large.

In presenting these historical sketches, the editors acknowledge with gratitude the kind assistance rendered them by the secretaries of the clubs, and especially by Messrs. M. Chamberlain, Recorder; G. L. Osgood, Jr., Gr.; P. S. Abbott, M. E. Ingalls, R. M. Gillespie, and L. K. Morse, of the Law School; R. M. Lovett, of the Graduate Department; M. O. Simons, of the Divinity School; T. Hoppin, J. H. Parker, J. A. Wilder, Henry Ware, P. H. Savage, and F. W. Dallinger, of the Senior Class; R. Homans, F. W. Garrison, and J. Sargent, Jr., of the Junior Class; and G. Crompton, Jr., and T. R. Kimball, Jr., of the Sophomore Class. The "New England Magazine," Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, and the "Harvard Club" of Chicago, kindly granted permission to reproduce illustrations belonging to them. The editors take pleasure in presenting reproductions of some rare wood-cuts of the college buildings.

A few clubs are omitted from this volume for various reasons; but especially because of failure on the part of the secretaries to co-operate with the editors. The response on the whole, however, has been prompt and courteous, and the editors return hearty thanks.

The Hasty Pudding Club's "pudding pot" has been placed on the cover, as the emblem of the representative club of the University.

The editors are aware that in spite of their efforts there will be much to criticise in this first issue of the HARVARD CLUB BOOK; but trust that future issues, with added illustrations and increased historical matter, will meet with general approval from the college.

SEAL OF THE ADVOCATE.

HARVARD ADVOCATE.

THE first number of the HARVARD ADVOCATE appeared May 11, 1866. Early in the preceding March "The Collegian" began its brief career, with the motto "Dulce est Periculum." But three numbers appeared, owing to the disrespectful allusions to the Faculty which crept into its columns. Among other things it published the following anecdote, which is supposed to be a bit of Socratic reasoning:—

"Suppose," says the reasoner, "a man should go to the Agora, and see ten men selling figs, and two men talking politics, what should he say was the business of the Agora?"

"Selling figs," the pupil would reply.

"Suppose a man should go to chapel, and see fifty men reading the morning paper, and ten men listening to the services, what should he say was the business of the chapel?"

The ADVOCATE took for its motto, "Veritas nihil veretur," and proclaimed itself as the representative of free thought among the students. Its founders were Messrs. Charles Gage, W. G. Peckham, J. L. Sanborn, F. P. Stearns, and E. W. Fox,—all of the Class of 1867. For a time the new paper had to struggle for an existence; but before long original contributions and a large subscription list placed it firmly on its feet, and it has been self-supporting ever since.

Owing to the position the paper took at its start in regard to free thought among the students, it became very popular at once; and at that time it was considered to be as much of an honor to be an editor of the ADVOCATE as to pull on the 'Varsity crew.

EMBLEM OF THE A. D. CLUB.

A. D. CLUB.

THE early history of the A. D. CLUB is that of the Harvard Chapter of the "A. I. Φ." Just when the change took place is not known, for the latter society, when forbidden to exist by the action of the Faculty in 1859, for some years secretly maintained its vitality under the title of the "Haidee," a name which had been given to a college boat. From this came the present title of the A. D. CLUB. The principal motive in reorganizing the "Haidee" into the A. D. CLUB, was to provide an inexpensive social club which should elect as members, as far as possible, those men who took an active part in college life and questions of college policy. In this the A. D. has fulfilled the highest expectations of its founders.

In 1873 it was voted, "that any member of the A. D. CLUB accepting an election into any college club of a like nature, shall forfeit his membership." This made the A. D. a club of the same nature as the "Porcellian," as up to that time it had been possible for men to be members of both. During the same year, the old quarters being found inadequate, the club moved into a new building on Brattle Street, conveniently near to the college. In 1878 another change was made, and the club moved to its present quarters, corner of Dunster and Mt. Auburn Streets. This situation was selected because though very near to the college yard, it was yet retired and inconspicuous.

According to the constitution, the A. D. CLUB is limited to eighteen Seniors, twelve Juniors, and six Sophomores; but this limit has never been reached, the number of members rarely having exceeded twenty-five. The A. D. has an excellent library of between five and six thousand volumes.

SEAL OF ALPHA DELTA PHI SOCIETY.

ALPHA DELTA PHI SOCIETY.

THE Harvard chapter of the ALPHA DELTA PHI SOCIETY owes its origin directly to a visit to Cambridge, in 1836, of delegates representing the society chapters of Yale, Columbia, and the University of New York. A few members of the classes of 1837 and '38 were initiated as honorary members of the chapters at Yale and Columbia, with the intention of having these new members form an active chapter at Harvard. The Faculty, however, voted that "any proposition for the establishment of a secret society is inadmissible; and that it is inexpedient to increase the number of literary societies in the College."

This action put an end to the introduction of the chapter until 1837, when the decree of the Faculty was evaded by initiating the new men as honorary members of the Yale chapter. Thus the ALPHA DELTA PHI at Harvard began its existence, and continued as the "Honorary Yale Chapter," down to 1846, having its rooms over the Porcellian library.

At this time the Faculty granted the petition of the Society, owing to the excellent reputation it had sustained; and regular forms of election and initiation were instituted. The Society was organized for social and literary purposes,—the former events taking place in the private rooms of the members, while the literary exercises occurred in the Society rooms.

In 1865 the ALPHA DELTA PHI surrendered its charter, and existed for some years as the "A. D. Club." Since then, however, these two societies have been separated, and exist as distinct organizations.

HARVARD ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

THE HARVARD ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION was founded in 1874, in order to send a team to compete in the first intercollegiate athletic contests at Saratoga, on July 20 of that year. Interest soon became universal, and the students entered into athletics with much enthusiasm,—the first field meeting for the college being held on October 24, 1874. The first winter meeting was held in the Harvard Gymnasium, March 4, 1876.

The most important function of the ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION since its organization has always been in training the Mott Haven team. The success of Harvard in track athletics is largely due to the support given to the Association by the college. Of the Mott Haven contests, Harvard won eight first places in fourteen years, and thus became the owner of the Mott Haven trophy cup. Columbia won first place three times, Yale twice, and Princeton once during the same period. In the first match for the new Mott Haven cup, last year, Harvard was again victorious.

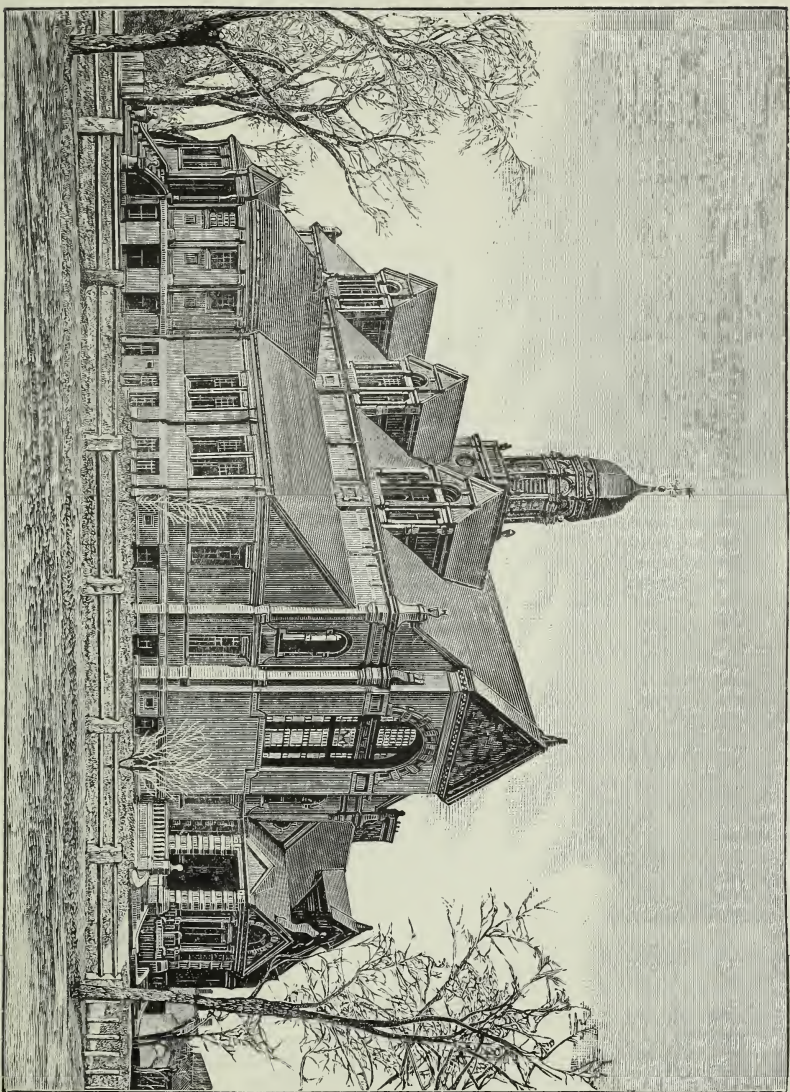

In 1890 the dual league between Harvard and Yale in track athletics was begun, and Harvard has won the three meetings already contested.

The present officers of the Association are as follows:—

President	C. R. BARDEEN, '93.
Vice-President	G. R. FEARING, JR., '93.

HARVARD BANJO CLUB.

THE HARVARD BANJO CLUB was founded in 1886, but did not effect permanent organization until 1887, when W. S. Scott became leader, and S. F. McCleary, Jr., secretary. During this season the Club consisted of five first and two second banjos, two piccolo banjos, two guitars, and one mandolin. Thirty concerts were given, and the Club was everywhere received with enthusiasm.

In May, 1888, G. L. Osgood, Jr., '91, was chosen leader. He took control the following autumn, and made several changes in the make-up of the Club. The second banjos were dropped and the guitars were doubled. This strengthened the Club, by giving stability to the first banjos, and a full, powerful bass part. Under Mr. Osgood's leadership, the success of the Club became very marked. The Club gave twenty-four concerts during this season, including a Western trip. It was everywhere received well, and won the reputation of being the best amateur banjo club in the country, and better than most professional clubs.

The season of 1889-'90 was practically a repetition of the previous one, without a Western trip. The Club this year dropped the piccolo banjos, which were judged to hurt rather than help the general effect of the instruments. G. L. Osgood, Jr., '91, was again leader during this season, as he was the following one of '90-'91, until April, '91, when he resigned in favor of F. L. Kennedy, '92.

This season the Club again joined the Glee Club in a successful Western trip. Banjorines were substituted for banjos, on account of their more brilliant tone. The change was received with favor by almost every one. About twenty concerts were given during each of the seasons of 1889-90, and 1890-91.

In the spring of 1888 the Banjo Club inaugurated the custom of an annual dinner. There are always a few guests, former members; and the evenings are enlivened with songs and reminiscences. M. O. Simons, '91, was president for two years; and his good advice and musical judgment did much towards bringing the Club to a high standard of excellence. The Banjo Club has never been able, like the Glee Club, to obtain the benefit of a good professional coach, having always been obliged to rely entirely on the efforts of its members.

HARVARD BASE-BALL ASSOCIATION.

IT was not until the year 1862 that the game of base-ball was introduced into Harvard College, although it had been played for some years in New York, and in some of the preparatory schools. In this year, however, the members of the freshman class established what was known as the "'66 Base-Ball Club." They obtained permission from the Cambridge city government to use the Common as a practice ground, which they did until 1864.

On October 12, 1864, a Varsity club was formed, which played with representatives of the different colleges, and with other amateur nines. In 1868 it received a challenge from Yale to play a championship game, in which the condition was that the men on both teams should be chosen from the academical departments. This challenge was accepted, and on July 23 of the same year, Harvard played her first intercollegiate game with Yale. The game was well played on both sides, and was won by Harvard by a score of 25 to 17.

On June 5, 1869, the Harvard club visited Brooklyn, and played their second match with Yale,—again winning by 41 to 24. The next season Harvard sent out the strongest team which had yet represented her, and this nine met the Yale team on July 5, 1870. The club went on the field with great confidence; but played its poorest game, and barely escaped defeat. The score in this game was: Harvard, 24; Yale, 22.

Up to this time the condition which Yale imposed in her first challenge had been rigidly adhered to; but in 1871 the captains of the Harvard and Yale teams met and agreed that in the future the college nine should be selected from any department of the University. In 1871 Yale greatly outbatted Harvard; but the game was won through superior fielding,—Harvard, 22; Yale, 19. Two games were arranged with Yale, both of which were won by Harvard through strong, uphill play; and in 1873 two games were played with a like result. In 1874, however, Yale put a remarkably strong team into the field, and Harvard was twice defeated,—4-0, 7-4.

From 1880 to 1887 the intercollegiate contests included Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Amherst, Brown, and Dartmouth: Yale coming out ahead six years, and Harvard one. Harvard's team in 1885 had the unparalleled record of ten victories and no defeats. From 1887 to 1889 the contests were between Harvard, Yale, and Princeton,—Yale winning each year. In 1890 Yale beat Harvard and Princeton, and Harvard did not play Princeton. In 1891 Princeton beat Yale, while Harvard played neither college. Last year Harvard beat Princeton, and tied with Yale,—each college winning one game.

VARSVITY BASEBALL NINE '22.

HARVARD BOAT CLUB.

THE first club boats were introduced at Cambridge in 1844, and in the fall of the same year the HARVARD BOAT CLUB was formed by members of the Class of 1846. They purchased the "Oneida," an eight-oared boat, in which the first race was won from Yale, in 1852. In 1856 practically the first 'Varsity boat was purchased, and a new boat-house took the place of the inadequate one leased in 1846. Until 1863 all boats were named, and we have handed down to us the titles of the "Huron," "Halcyon," "Ariel," "Iris," "Haidee," and many others, besides the original "Oneida." Several separate boat clubs flourished, and inter-club races were of frequent occurrence.

The first great race was with Yale, on Lake Winnipiseogee, August 3, 1852. The crew did not practice much, "for fear," as one of the crew said, "of blistering their hands." They succeeded in winning, however, by about four lengths, and received black-walnut oars as trophies. In 1855 Harvard and Yale entered two crews each,—the "Iris," one of the Harvard boats, winning by forty-five seconds.

The next few years were experimental ones in college boating, and gradually the models improved, and system came to be employed. In 1857 the first six-oared shell in America was made for Harvard. In the race for the Beacon cup, the following June, the new boat won in remarkable time, and the model was at once adopted.

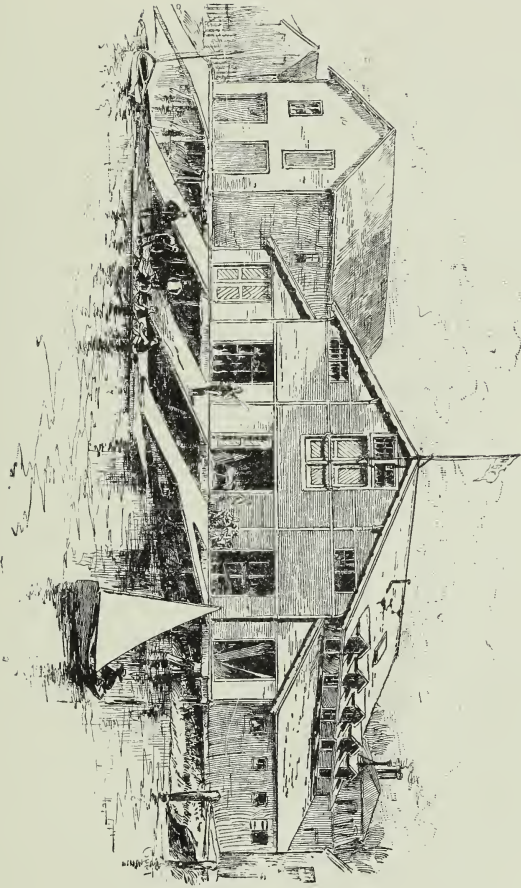

In 1858 intercollegiate boating really began, and the contests soon narrowed themselves down to races between Harvard and Yale. Since 1864 Harvard and Yale have practically had a dual league. Of these races, each college has won twelve. At first the races were at Worcester; then, for two years, at Springfield; but since 1878 they have been rowed at New London.

In 1869 Harvard rowed an international collegiate race with Oxford, and although defeated, did much to raise the respect of our English cousins for American oarsmen.

The HARVARD BOAT CLUB adopted its constitution in 1871, and immediately began on a new boat-house. The funds were raised by subscriptions, and by benefit games given by the ball nine.

CANADIAN CLUB.

THE CANADIAN CLUB of Harvard University is composed of the officers, graduates, and undergraduates of the University who are of Canadian birth, or who take an especial interest in the Dominion of Canada. Its objects are to afford a means of reunion for Canadian students in Cambridge, and to facilitate the acquisition of information by students in Canada desirous of pursuing advanced courses at Harvard.

The Club was organized in March, 1890, with a membership of thirty, and has continued in successful operation. At the regular monthly meetings of the Club, papers are read and discussions held on subjects of interest to the members as students or as Canadians, and special meetings are held for special purposes. At the opening of College the new members are welcomed at an informal reception, and on the Queen's Birthday (May 24) the members dine together.

In November, 1892, the Club invited the Hon. Edward Blake to address them on the Irish Question. The address was delivered in Sever Hall, and the public were invited to attend. In 1890, the Club issued a pamphlet containing information useful to students, and intends to issue a second edition during the present term.

The first officers of the Club were: President, T. W. Nicholson; Vice-President, W. C. Colby; Secretary-Treasurer, A. W. MacRae.

LA CONFÉRENCE FRANÇAISE

DE L'UNIVERSITÉ HARVARD.

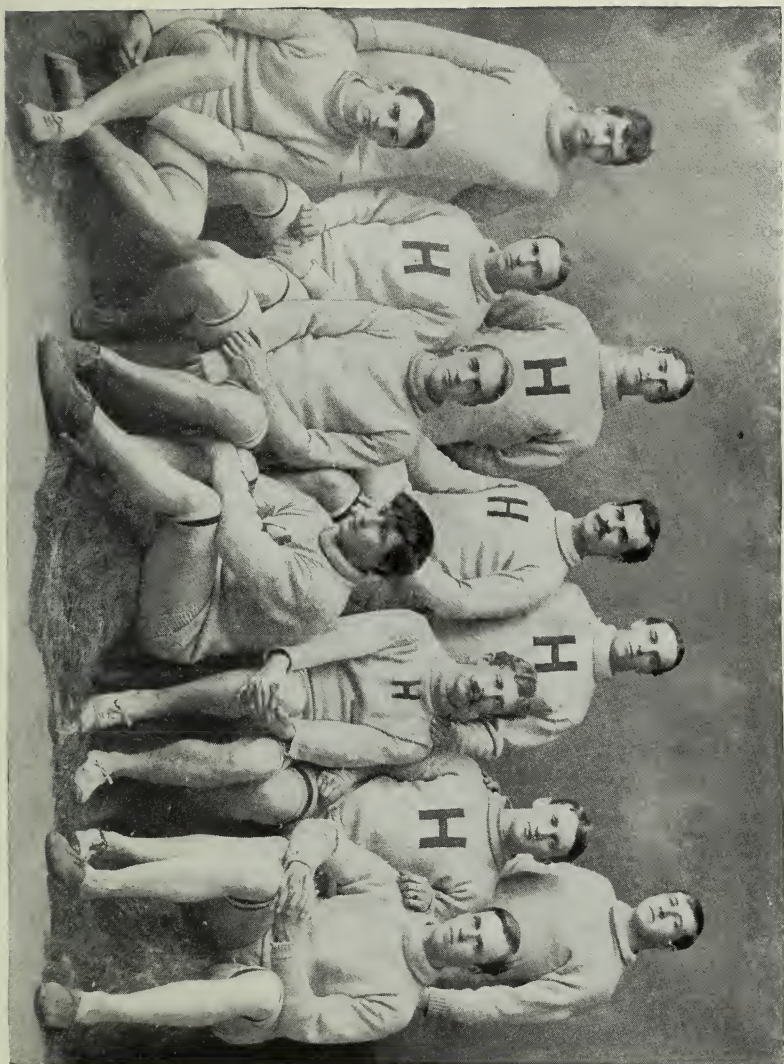

A FEW months previous to the formation of the "Deutscher Verein," a French society was organized with a similar object. It was known as "Le Cercle Française," and held its first meeting in November, 1873. Its constitution required that the president should always be a member of the college Faculty. From this society grew LA CONFÉRENCE FRANCAISE, the present energetic French club, which began its individual existence in 1886. The introduction of theatricals has added great interest to the society, and its meetings have ever been of great interest and value to its members. The present officers and members are as follows :

HARVARD CRICKET CLUB.

THE HARVARD CRICKET CLUB was founded in 1862, and for the first few years of its existence considerable enthusiasm was manifested. The number of men interested, however, was not large, so that when some of the most energetic members graduated from college, the club gradually declined.

In 1879 there were several excellent cricket-players in college, and they formed the nucleus of a new organization. The old CRICKET CLUB was thoroughly reorganized, and a very creditable team was made up. Sufficient energy was applied to give the Club a lease of life which has continued to the present day, and it seems likely to exist for some time to come.

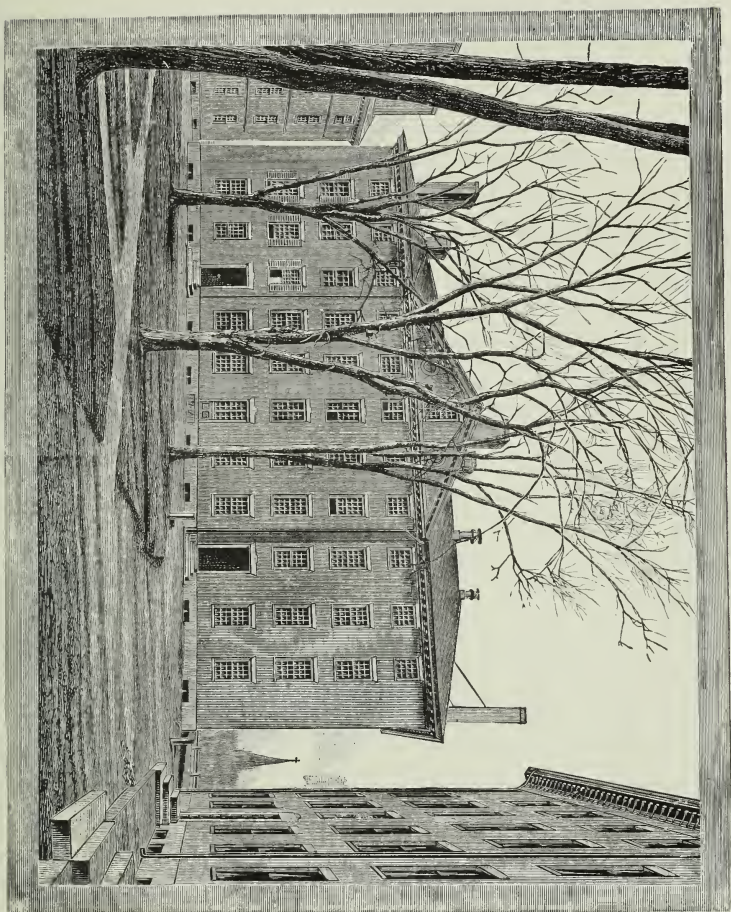

Harvard has played intercollegiate cricket matches with the University of Pennsylvania and Haverford College, always making an excellent showing, although not being strong enough to win the championship. Efforts have been made to compete with Yale, and last year a date was made, but the match was forfeited, owing to Yale's inability to arouse sufficient interest.

The present officers of the Club are as follows :—

President	C. ST. C. SKINNER, L. S.
Secretary	W. S. HOCKLEY, '94.
Captain	*W. MACVEAGH, JR., '93.

HARVARD CRIMSON.

THE present college publication known as the CRIMSON is not the immediate successor to the periodical formerly published under that name. Daily journalism at Harvard began with the first issue of the "Harvard Echo," December 9, 1879. The origin of the paper is thus humorously stated: "Now it came to pass that when the college was flourishing, and the gymnasium was also daily increasing its ropes and bowling-alleys, certain idle youths beheld two lights in a yard; one was the 'Crimson,' and the other much the same, but termed by the people 'Advocate.' And the next day these lights were not seen, nor the next. So these youths argued together and said, 'Surely such lights are good and useful, and why should the college and the gymnasium go without a light every day?' And they resolved to make a light which should shine daily; and when it was discussed concerning the name, and 'Reflector' and 'Echo' were proposed, they determined to take the one which cost less ink and trouble to write, and so came into existence the 'Harvard Echo.'"

From the "Echo" sprang the "Harvard Herald," the immediate predecessor of the CRIMSON. The early years were not easy ones, but constant efforts on the part of succeeding boards of editors have placed the paper on a sound financial basis, and have made it an indispensable part of the student life.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY CYCLING ASSOCIATION.

THE HARVARD UNIVERSITY CYCLING ASSOCIATION was founded in 1890, with the intention of putting the sport of cycling on a broader footing than it had hitherto attained. In the fall and spring, club runs are held for the benefit of members who do not care to race, — besides hare-and-hounds runs, and two annual road-races. When the Association is fairly established it will send a team to compete with other colleges and in outside race-meets. In the meanwhile, it is a valuable aid to the Mott-Haven team in that it increases the chances of winning the bicycle event in the intercollegiate games.

The Cycling Association has held three spring meetings and one fall meeting, open to all amateur riders in America. In the spring of 1890 the score of points made during the meeting was: H. U. C. A., 18; N. Y. A. C., 12; Highlands B. C., 11. On June 5 the Harvard team defeated the Yale team at New Haven, 15 to 6. In the spring of 1891 the H. U. C. A. again captured the cup for the club scoring the greatest number of points. The quality of the sport seen at the race-meetings has steadily improved, and in 1892 the track record was lowered to 2.31 by Tyler, of the Springfield B. C.

There are about one hundred and fifty members in the college, with the following officers:—

DELTA UPSILON FRATERNITY.

THE Harvard Chapter of the DELTA UPSILON FRATERNITY was organized in 1881 by Charles W. Birtwell and others, the purpose of the society being to bring together men of scholarly and literary tastes. It has since numbered among its members some of the most distinguished scholars of the University. Of its one hundred and eighty-six members, fifty-four have been members of the "Phi Beta Kappa." The society is marked by the close and cordial friendship which exists between its members, and the active interest of its alumni. It is the largest and most influential chapter of the DELTA UPSILON FRATERNITY.

Since 1887 the society has occupied rooms at number nine Brattle Street. The custom of giving spring theatricals has recently been successfully inaugurated.

ENGLISH CLUB.

ON February 13, 1889, the instructors of the English department and a small number of undergraduates met at the house of Professor (now Dean) Briggs, to consider plans for founding an English Club. The result of this meeting was to establish the present organization.

The constitution provides that the president and vice-president of the Club shall always be instructors in the English department, and that the secretary shall be a senior. The exercises of the Club are of a purely literary nature. The membership is largely composed of the instructors in the English department, and of resident graduates who are pursuing the study of English; but undergraduate members may be elected to the number of twenty. The meetings of the Club are always held in the rooms of the members.

MASSACHUSETTS HALL, BEFORE ERECTION OF "NEW GATE."

FOOT-BALL ASSOCIATION.

THE first foot-ball contest between Harvard and Yale was in 1875. Each team then consisted of fifteen men, and no player could "pick up, throw, or carry the ball on any part of the field." The features of the game were "bounding, batting, bunting, and babying" the ball; but touchdowns and trying at goals were not thought of at that time. The oval Rugby ball was used for the first time this year, and Harvard was successful. It was not until 1876 that the Rugby rules were adopted, and then Yale won,—one goal to nothing,—with eleven men on a side. In 1877 there was no game, and in 1878 Yale again won by the same score,—one goal to nothing. The game in 1879 was virtually a victory for Yale.

Since 1880 the game has been played similar to the game of to-day. In 1880 Yale made one goal and one touchdown and two safety touchdowns; Harvard was forced to make the remarkable number of nine safeties, and did not score. In 1881 safeties were first made to count. Harvard was beaten at New Haven, eight points to nothing. The Yale team of 1882 had a remarkable rush line, and Harvard was defeated on her own grounds by one goal and three touchdowns to nothing. In 1883 the present system of counting by points was first introduced. A goal from a touchdown counted six points, as it does to-day, and a goal from the field five points; but a touchdown only counted two points, and a safety but one. This year the game was played at the polo grounds in New York, and Yale again won,—23 to 2. After this a touchdown counted four points, and a safety two, as to-day. Harvard's team in 1884 was the poorest she ever had. Wesleyan beat her 16 to 0, and Pennsylvania 4 to 0. The score of Princeton was 36 to 6, and Yale ran up the highest score ever made against a Harvard team, scoring 52 to 0. The Faculty prohibited foot-ball in 1885; but in 1886 they relented, and Harvard, though defeated, sent out her best team thus far.

Captain Holden's team, in 1887, was the first really formidable one Harvard sent out. They defeated Princeton at Cambridge by a score of 12 to 0; but after an exciting game, lost to Yale by a score of 17 to 8. This game was the first appearance of Cumnock and Perry Trafford. In 1888 Harvard was not allowed to play in New York, so had to forfeit the game to Yale. In 1889 Harvard again lost, but by the creditable score of 6 to 0. In 1890 Harvard won its first victory since the Rugby game was introduced, Captain Cumnock's team scoring twelve points to Yale's six. The 1891 game was another defeat for Harvard, 10 to 0; and this year Harvard lost, 6 to 0.

SEAL OF THE GLEE CLUB.

HARVARD GLEE CLUB.

THE HARVARD GLEE CLUB was founded in 1858 by five members of the Senior Class,—Messrs. Josiah Bradlee, B. W. Crowninshield, Ozias Goodwin, John Homans, and C. H. Learoyd. The originators felt “that enough singers could be found in the College to form a good society at once, and that the ‘Pierian Sodality’ and the GLEE CLUB could co-operate in promoting a taste for music in the College.”

The first meeting was held in a room over a grocery store, on the corner of Holyoke and Harvard Streets, at which B. W. Crowninshield was elected the first president, C. H. Learoyd musical director, J. Schouler secretary, and O. P. Abercrombie treasurer. The Club was thus organized, and at the first concert consisted of sixteen members. At first the Club devoted its efforts to giving serenades in Cambridge and Boston, but on June 9, 1858, the “Pierian Sodality” and the GLEE CLUB combined for their first concert, in Lyceum Hall. This met with great favor; and thus began a long series of successful concerts. The Club now enjoys rooms of its own, and has started a library for its members.

HARVARD GUITAR AND MANDOLIN CLUB.

THE HARVARD GUITAR AND MANDOLIN CLUB was founded in 1887, by Gilbert Russell Payson, Theodore S. Beecher, Jerome W. Coombs, and Richard D. Ware. A constitution was drawn up, and G. R. Payson was elected the first president, while T. S. Beecher became secretary and treasurer.

The Pierian Sodality, the Glee Club, and the Banjo Club were already in existence when the MANDOLIN CLUB was formed, completing the circle of musical organizations of the University.

At the first trial for the Club a large number of candidates appeared, from which enough good players were selected to complete the membership. When the Club made its debut, its reception was such as to prove conclusively its desirability as a college organization. Each year it has been strengthened and improved, and the interest in the mandolin has increased to such an extent that in the autumn of 1891 a second mandolin club was formed, to serve as a training school for the 'Varsity.

The Club consisted primarily of first and second mandolins and guitars, but in 1889 a violin was added, by means of which a sustained tone can be produced, in striking contrast to the pizzicato of the mandolins and the harp-like tones of the guitars.

The air is usually held by the first mandolins, the second mandolins playing the second part, and the guitars the bass. The violin plays a sort of obligato, which gives color and congruity to the whole.

In 1888 Señor Louis T. Romero was engaged to coach the Club as a whole, and to give private instruction to the individual members. His teaching has done much toward raising the Club to its present position.

The MANDOLIN CLUB joins with the Glee Club and Pierian Sodality in giving its regular concerts, and makes an annual Western tour with the other musical organizations.

THE HASTY PUDDING CLUB.

THE "HASTY PUDDING CLUB" was founded in 1795, in order "to cherish the feelings of friendship and patriotism," having among its original members Dr. John C. Warren, Hon. Daniel A. White, Prof. Asahel Stearns, and Hon. Horace Binney. For many years the Club celebrated Washington's Birthday with an oration, patriotic speeches, and songs, concluding with a dinner. This custom later fell into disuse, and the Club devoted itself more particularly to social purposes. The name of the Club is derived from the stipulation in the original constitution that "two members, in alphabetical order, shall provide a pot of hasty pudding for every meeting."

The early meetings of the Club took place in the rooms of the different members; but in 1849 No. 29 Stoughton Hall was obtained from the college authorities for a regular place of meeting. A few years later an adjoining room was granted to the Club; and in 1871 two other rooms on the same floor were obtained, and these were all made over to suit the requirements of the members. It was not long after this that the Club outgrew these quarters, and a club building was obtained on Jarvis Field. This building, which is still known as the "Old Pudding Club-house," and which is now used by the Glee Club, was occupied until 1888, when the present attractive club-house on Holyoke Street was opened to the members. The funds for the erection of this building were obtained by the energetic work of the club members from the classes of 1886, '87, and '88.

SEAL OF INSTITUTE OF 1770.

INSTITUTE OF 1770.

THE INSTITUTE OF 1770 is the oldest and largest society at Harvard, and was founded by members of the class of 1771. Among the prime movers were Samuel Phillips, who later became lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts, and John Warren. The original purpose of the Society was to oppose "the cold indifference to the practice of oratory," and for many years it existed under the name of the "Speaking Club." The members were called upon to take the most sacred oaths not to disclose the secret of the Society, but in spite of this precaution the college learned that the Society had the practice of oratory as its fundamental object. Thus, fearing that the too significant name might have had something to do with the discovery of the Society's secret, the "Speaking Club" changed its title, and became known as the "Patriotic Association." A few years later this name was given up, and the Society called itself "The Social Fraternity of 1770," until 1825.

During this time several rival societies had sprung up; but, after flourishing for a while, they had invariably dropped out of existence, or else been swallowed up by the larger organization. In 1825, however, the success of the "Social Fraternity of 1770" was threatened by the "Hermetick Society," and the Ἀκριβολογούμενοι, two rivals which proved of much greater strength than any of their predecessors. The three societies, therefore, combined under the name of the "Institute of 1770," by which it has since been known. The society seal was designed in 1837 by the Rev. Samuel Longfellow, who was then in his sophomore year.

The "Institute of 1770" gradually lost its individuality, and finally merged into the D. K. E. This continued until the '92 members determined to put the Society on its feet again. Subscriptions were obtained, and the Society now enjoys commodious and attractive rooms.

HARVARD LAMPOON.

THE first number of the HARVARD LAMPOON appeared on February 10, 1876, with a board of editors composed of R. W. Curtis, '76; A. M. Sherwood, '78; E. M. Wheelwright, '76; E. S. Martin, '77; S. Sherwood, '76; J. T. Wheelwright, '76; and W. S. Otis, '78. The editors announced that they should "try, with trenchant pencil and sarcastic pen, to hit off the foibles of our 'little world,' and to open a field where the last jest at the club-table and the latest undergraduate freak may find a fitting place. In our philanthropic mission, base gold is of secondary importance; but we would remind our readers that this faucet of real wit may have to be turned off if the rates are not paid, and that a sordid printer and an unimaginative heliotyper will not receive our efforts at wit as legal tender. Our closing words are 'nunc est "buy"-bendum.'"

The first few years of the LAMPOON were very difficult ones, and finally publication was suspended. This proved to be but a temporary embarrassment, for in 1881 the second series of the paper was begun with such enthusiasm that it is now on a firm financial basis, and boasts the reputation of being the "only successful." The editors of the first volume of the Second Series were: L. G. Bridgman, '81; C. A. Coolidge, '81; Curtis Guild, Jr., '81; W. W. Kent, '82; C. Sprague, '81; W. R. Thayer, '81; and M. S. HARVARD LAWN TENNIS CLUB.

THE HARVARD LAWN TENNIS CLUB was formed in the fall of 1884, with H. A. Taylor as its first president. Previous to this action each student, or club of students, had to hire courts by the year, and thus the progress of the game was greatly handicapped. With the formation of the Club, however, tennis at once became popular, and the thirty courts at first laid out were in constant demand.

R. D. Sears was the champion of the college in 1882, and P. E. Presbrey won the title in 1883. With the organization of the Club, regular tournaments were held each fall, and the championship became more decisive. The champions since that time have been as follows:—

HARVARD LAW REVIEW.

THE HARVARD LAW REVIEW grew out of the "Langdell Law Club," an organization formed in the autumn of 1886 by eight members of the third-year class in the School, for the purpose of writing and discussing legal essays. It soon occurred to the Club that a magazine connected with the School would not only utilize these essays, but also give the members of the Faculty the best possible medium for the publication of their researches. The idea met with warm approval from the Faculty and among graduates of the School. In February, 1887, the "Langdell Club" formally resolved itself into the "Harvard Law School Publishing Association," and in April the first number appeared. The REVIEW has been successful from the start, owing chiefly to the generous support given by both the Faculty and the Alumni Association. The former have been by far its most valuable body of contributors. The latter, in 1890-91, sent Volume IV. free to every one of its members, — with the result of increasing by almost fifty per cent the permanent subscription list. This now numbers over eight hundred, of whom over three quarters are libraries and practising lawyers, and over a half are outside of Cambridge and Boston. Almost every State of the Union and half a dozen foreign countries are represented.

The REVIEW is published every month from October to May, inclusive, — eight numbers in all, giving a volume, the current year, of four hundred and fifty pages, an increase of about seventy pages over Volume I. The editorial and business management is entirely in the hands of a self-perpetuating student board, who also write the editorial notes, the book reviews, and a digest of important recent decisions. The articles are now entirely by older men, and hitherto largely by graduates of the School. The policy of the magazine at present is to save money (it already has $2,000 laid by), to broaden its circle of contributors, and to enlarge its size, so that without repelling the general reader, it can make a specialty of historical research in the law, — a field in which it already appears to have no competitor in this country.

It is interesting to note that since the REVIEW was started, the example of the Harvard Law School has been followed by Columbia, Yale, the University of Michigan, and the New York Law School, so called.

THE HARVARD MONTHLY.

THE HARVARD MONTHLY in its foundation was the direct outcome of the organization of the English Department on its present lines. When every undergraduate was obliged to give one-ninth of his college work to English writing, and a few were encouraged to give much more, it soon resulted that literary work was done in the University which, to quote the prospectus of the MONTHLY, "was worth printing, and for its literary merit, worth reading." It was to gather up such work and to make it effective that the HARVARD MONTHLY was founded, by a board of editors chiefly from the class of '86. The first number appeared in October, 1885. Among the founders were A. B. Houghton, the first editor-in-chief; G. Santayana, Instructor in Philosophy at Harvard; G. R. Carpenter, Professor of English in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; W. M. Fullerton, Paris correspondent of the "London Times"; W. A. Leahy; T. P. Sanborn, and others. Another object of the MONTHLY was to give graduates of the University a means of expression,—to act as a medium of communication between them and the students. As to the students themselves the MONTHLY sought to represent no particular element or faction, to stand for no special policy, but in general to reflect "the strongest and soberest undergraduate thought."

These aims the MONTHLY has succeeded in realizing during the seven years of its life. It has published very much of the best literary work done by undergraduates; its series of graduate articles has included many of exceptional value and interest; its influence in the college world has always been in the direction of earnestness and seriousness.

The MONTHLY has retained its original form, an octavo of forty-five to fifty pages. The only considerable change in arrangement has been the introduction of a department, The Month, which gives a brief summary of events in the University.

SEAL OF THE NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

THE HARVARD NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY was formed May 4, 1837, by a few members of the classes of 1837 and '38, who were especially interested in the various branches of natural history. John Bacon, who afterwards became famous as a naturalist, was the first president. The meetings were held in the members' rooms, on Friday evenings, alternating with the "Hasty Pudding Club's" evenings. A little later, a recitation room in the north-west corner of Massachusetts Hall was obtained, and here the society set up its cases. The meetings consisted of "lectures," which were papers on subjects of general interest to the members, and the receiving of new specimens, with reports.

When the natural history subjects in College were increased, in 1869, a rival society sprang up, under the name of the "Harvard Lyceum of Natural History;" but the objects of the two organizations were so nearly identical that they soon combined. When Massachusetts Hall was changed into lecture rooms, the cabinet of the Society had to be broken up. The specimens were given over to the Museum, and the Society obtained new quarters in No. 17 Stoughton Hall.

MEDAL OF O. K. SOCIETY.

THE O. K. SOCIETY.

THE formation of the O. K. SOCIETY was the direct result of the reaction against the Greek letter societies by the Class of 1859. The original intention was to effect merely a temporary organization, but the remarkable success induced the members to make the Society a permanent one. In 1860, after strenuous efforts, the Society obtained a renewal of its charter from President Felton, and became firmly organized as a permanent organization.

The Society has always made it of primary importance to make its meetings of a literary rather than of a social character, and for this reason the meetings have always been held in the members' rooms. Theatricals were very popular with the Society for many years, and as a result a strong rivalry existed between the "O. K. Society" and the "Hasty Pudding Club." As soon as the theatricals were given up, however, all animosity disappeared, and members were elected into both societies with no reference whatever to their previous membership in either. The number of members has always been sixteen.

WATCH-KEY OF PHI BETA KAPPA SOCIETY.

PHI BETA KAPPA SOCIETY.

THE first regular meeting of the Harvard Chapter of the PHI BETA KAPPA SOCIETY was held September 5, 1781. Two years before this, the charter had been received from William and Mary College, in Virginia. For many years it existed as an active literary society, the meetings being held in the members' rooms.

In 1831, through the exertions of John Quincy Adams, all secrecy was removed from the requirements of the Society. The secret of the name then became known, — the letters standing for φιλοσοφία βίου κυβερνήτης, "Philosophy the guide of life."

While there was no rank list in college, the election of members was largely left to the discretion of the Society, always professing to be governed by the reputation of the candidates for scholarship and literary abilities. Partiality came to be used, however, and when the college rank list was established, it was made the basis for election.

In 1891 the Harvard Chapter voted to make any candidate eligible for membership, even without attaining the required rank, had he been prevented from doing so by sickness or other sufficient cause; or if especially qualified for membership in other respects. A candidate may also be rejected whose scholarship is up to the required standard, but whose abilities do not promise well for the future.

HARVARD PHILOSOPHICAL CLUB.

THE HARVARD PHILOSOPHICAL CLUB was established in 1885, and was the result of a general awakening among the students at that time. A new club seemed to be demanded, and the PHILOSOPHICAL CLUB was started to meet this need. The object of the club has always been to retain in its limited membership men who are especially congenial to each other, and a genial and pronounced individuality is as great a requirement for membership as to be deeply versed in philosophy. The development of individuality is a cardinal feature of the club.

It has been the custom of the club to invite members of the Faculty and men of letters to speak at their meetings, and these events are always characterized by the most lively interest and freedom of debate.

The present prosperity of the club is due in no small measure to the energetic enthusiasm shown by one of its founders, Mr. George Santayana, at present an instructor in the University, from the time when he first became a member.

PIERIAN SODALITY.

THE PIERIAN SODALITY was founded in 1808, and is the earliest musical club in college of which we have any record. Unfortunately the books containing the secretary's reports for the first twenty-four years have strangely disappeared, so that many interesting reminiscences have been lost to posterity. The founders were Alpheus Bigelow, Benjamin D. Bartlett, Joseph Eaton, John Gardner, and Frederic Kinloch, all of the Class of 1810. The early records included such names as William Powell Mason, Rev. Samuel Gilman (author of "Fair Harvard"), Rev. Dr. Henry Ware, Bishop Wainwright, William Ware (author of "Zenobia," etc.), and George B. Emerson.

The social life, as a sodality, was of greater importance in those early days than the actual merit of the exhibitions; and for many years the performances were limited to so-called "rehearsals," and to serenading. Little by little the enthusiasm of the members became less, however, until in 1832 the life of the SODALITY hung by a very slender thread. The departure of the class of 1832 from college left but a single member, who held all the offices, and faithfully performed the duties, — attending all the rehearsals, and keeping the SODALITY in existence until he was joined by kindred spirits, who placed it firmly on its feet again.

The "Pierians" held their rehearsals in No. 6 University Hall, where some of the members, less zealously inclined than the others, would take liberties with the notes which necessitated an abandonment of the rehearsal until another day. The serenades given by the SODALITY were by no means confined to Cambridge, but extended to Watertown, Brookline, Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, and Boston. Adventures were numerous, and the excitement kept the interest alive.

The later history of the SODALITY shows that the social element has given way to more meritorious endeavors in musical selections. The SODALITY joins with the other musical organizations in giving its regular concerts.

SEAL OF THE PI ETA SOCIETY.

PI ETA SOCIETY.

THE PI ETA SOCIETY owes its origin to the discussion, which had extended over several years, as to the possibility of establishing a new Senior society. On November 24, 1865, several members of the Class of 1866 assembled in Holworthy 22, — and this was the first of eleven meetings which were held before the organization was effected. When the petition was presented to the Faculty, it was reported that “the Faculty permit us to live as a society until the end of the College year, neither promising nor refusing a longer continuance.” Thus the Society’s lease of life had to be extended annually until 1869, when the Faculty removed all objections.

The first rooms of the Society were on Brighton Street, and here the PI ETA started on a most promising career. Gradually it gained, until at one time it could fairly claim to be considered as a rival of the “Hasty Pudding Club.” When the latter club built its beautiful club-house on Holyoke Street, however, the PI ETA became less desirable from comparison, and a steady decline set in. But for energetic action on the part of the ’90 and ’91 members, the Society would have died; but their efforts put it firmly on its feet again.

In 1873 the PI ETA occupied Nos. 29, 30, 31, and 32 in Hollis Hall. Here the first theatricals were given, which have proved one of the most attractive features of the Society.

PORCELLIAN CLUB.

THE precise date of the origin of the PORCELLIAN CLUB is not certainly known. The records extend no further back than 1791. According to a statement made some fifty years ago, a number of intimate friends were, so early as the year 1789, in the habit of meeting at one another's rooms on alternate Friday evenings, during the term, for social intercourse, the exercises terminating with a supper. There is some reason to suppose that this association was known among its members, if not to the University, by the name of the "Argonauts." It is also supposed that members were selected from all four of the classes, and continued to meet, with more or less regularity, until 1791, when it became the turn of Mr. Joseph McKean, then a member of the freshman class, to give an entertainment. The grand feature of this banquet was a young pig roasted whole; and so successful was the affair that it was resolved by the party there assembled to follow henceforth the example of Mr. McKean as closely as possible. Hence the society received the name of the "Pig Club,"—some of the votes of which are still preserved in the archives.

In 1792 the association assumed the title of the "Gentleman's Society," the officers of which were a Grand Marshal, and a Deputy Marshal, selected from the Senior class, and a Corresponding and Recording Secretary from the junior class. The name of the "Gentleman's Society" being considered, for obvious reasons, prejudicial to its interests, it was in 1794 again changed to its present title, the PORCELLIAN CLUB OF HARVARD COLLEGE.

In 1831 the PORCELLIAN CLUB and the "Knights of the Square Table," a club organized in 1809, were united under the name of the former. For some time previous the members of the one had generally belonged to the other; and the objects and interests of both were identical. A strong desire having existed for this alliance, it was formally agreed upon, and executed on the 31st of March, 1831.

Until 1833 the books, pictures, and other property of the Club had been kept in the Librarian's room; but the members, becoming fully sensible of the inconvenience and insecurity attending this method of preserving so large and valuable a collection, obtained new quarters, building the commodious club-house now enjoyed by the members. The Club has always been a secret organization, and has never made public the names of its members.

HARVARD REFORM CLUB.

THE HARVARD REFORM CLUB started in 1889 as the "Harvard Free Wool Club," but last year the objects of the club were extended beyond a mere reform in the tariff, and the Club devoted itself to the broader subject of political reform. The Club welcomes any member of the University, regardless of party, who is in sympathy with the objects of the Club,—reform. The Club intends to hold an annual dinner, at which the prominent reformers of the country should be present and speak, and also to hold meetings in Sanders Theatre, at which well-known speakers will talk on the important questions in political reform.

Its first rally was held November 9, when temporary officers were elected; and a week later a constitution was adopted and permanent organization effected. J. L. Dodge, '91, was elected president; R. M. Gillespie, '92, secretary; and A. P. Stone, '93, treasurer. Public meetings were held January 22 and April 22, 1892, when speeches were made by Hon. F. T. Greenhalge and Senator J. R. Hawley, respectively. The membership is now about seven hundred. The present officers are as follows:—

HARVARD SHOOTING CLUB.

THE HARVARD SHOOTING CLUB was founded in the fall of 1883, for the purpose of creating an interest in shooting at Harvard. Among the first members were C. C. Foster, J. A. Jeffries, W. H. Slocum, F. B. Austin, W. L. Allen, J. A. Frye, and G. A. Morrison. The Club was open to all members of the University, and soon had a large membership. For some time the shoots for cups given by the Club were held on the grounds of the Middlesex Shooting Club at Watertown, but in 1890, by means of a subscription, a club house was built on the Allston marshes, near the Soldiers' Field, which the Club still uses.

Before 1886 no team matches were shot, but since then the following matches have taken place: In 1886 Harvard beat the Dedham Gun Club twice, and '86 won the class championship. In 1887 Harvard beat the Dedham Gun Club once, the Jamaica Plain Gun Club twice, and the University of Pennsylvania Gun Club twice. In this year, '90 won the class championship. In 1888 Harvard was beaten by the University of Pennsylvania Gun Club and by the Wellington Gun Club; '88 won the class championship. A team of graduates beat the teams of the Law School and the undergraduates. In 1889 Harvard beat the Yale Gun Club twice, and the Country Club team, but was beaten by the Lexington Gun Club. In 1890 Harvard was beaten by the Yale Gun Club, and '90 won the class championship. In the winter of 1887-88, a subscription was raised among the founders of the Club, and a silver cup was presented to the Club, called the "Founders' Cup," to be held by each man winning it, and to become the property of any man winning it eight times, or four times consecutively. The cup is still in the possession of the Club. Each fall a match is shot with the Yale Gun Club at Springfield, and each spring at Cambridge and New Haven alternatively. Harvard won the shoot in the fall of 1892, and lost those in the spring and fall of 1891 and the spring of 1892. Shoots are held twice a week, and the Founders' Cup is shot for every month during the season.

SIGNET SOCIETY.

THE SIGNET SOCIETY was founded by members of the Class of 1871, during their junior year. The membership was small, and was intended to include the representative men of the Class. Thus at least five of the members had to rank in the first half of their class. Orations and debates were superseded by essays and conversation, and theatricals were absolutely prohibited. At first it was intended to make the SIGNET SOCIETY a rival of the "Hasty Pudding Club," but this proved to be impracticable, so the idea was abandoned.

On Class Day morning, 1872, the Society gave the "Class Breakfast," in Massachusetts Hall, to the Faculty and members of the graduating class, out of compliment to its president, who was the Class-Day orator.

A cardinal principle in the constitution of the Society is that "no proposition to influence class elections shall ever be in order."

ST. PAUL'S SOCIETY.

IN 1861 an informal meeting was held by a few undergraduates, with a view of organizing a religious association made up of the churchmen in the University. The proposition met with a favorable reception, and the association was formed under the name of the ST. PAUL'S RELIGIOUS SOCIETY. The first president was Rev. Hercules Warren Fay, then of the Class of 1862. For some unaccountable reason, however, the interest seemed to diminish after the first enthusiasm died away, and the meetings were discontinued. About a year later the meetings were again resumed, and have been continued ever since.

The objects of the Society, as stated in its constitution, are "to bring the Episcopal students of the University into acquaintance with each other, to afford them opportunities of uniting in worship agreeably to the spirit and form of their Church, of giving to each other counsel and support in the performance of Christian duties, and by maintaining a library, to give them convenient access to religious literature."

THETA DELTA CHI SOCIETY.

THE Greek-letter society of THETA DELTA CHI was founded in 1847 at Union College, while it was among the first colleges in the country, and the time was most favorable for starting a new fraternity. The fraternity proved popular from the start; and nearly all of the charges have had a most successful career, with the exception, perhaps, of a number in the South, which were killed by the Civil War. During the last few years there has been a great awakening among the alumni of this fraternity; and this, combined with many successful efforts of the different charges to build and own chapter-houses, has resulted in many requests from college undergraduates for the grant of charters.

The fraternity has been a leader and pioneer ever since its foundation. It was the first to adopt the word charge instead of chapter; it was the first secret fraternity to issue a journal, and it was the first to adopt a system of government by a Grand Lodge composed of two undergraduates and one graduate member. The first flag displayed by any fraternity was that raised on the Astor House in New York City in 1870, by THETA DELTA CHI men.

The charge at Harvard was first established in 1855, but went out of existence with the general dissolution, by the Faculty, of all similar societies in 1857. It has lately been revived, and it is now in a most flourishing condition.

HARVARD UNION.

THE HARVARD UNION was formed in 1832 by members of the two upper classes. Under date of February 17, the first entry of the journal reads: "Certain members of the senior and junior classes assembled to consider the expediency of establishing a society for improvement in the art of addressing considerable audiences, and a committee of five was appointed to draw up a constitution." The first regular meeting was held February 24th, when the constitution was adopted, and the following officers elected: senior president, George Ticknor Curtis; junior president, Daniel Fletcher Webster; senior secretary, James A. Dorr; junior secretary, Francis Bowen. The constitution and by-laws have been lost, but from entries in the journal various matters are learned which indicate the methods of procedure. A feature of every debate was a lecture delivered by some member of the Union, following which came the debate proper, opened by a principal disputant on each side.

The society's first lease of life lasted until 1839, when the lack of interest compelled the society to cease holding its debates. Among the officers of the society, besides those already mentioned, were James Russell Lowell, Edward Everett Hale, E. Rockwood Hoar, and Charles Theodore Russell.

From 1839 to 1880 the records of the Union are missing; but it is known that during this period the society had only a spasmodic existence. During the five years from 1880 to the spring of 1885, membership to the Union was open to any member of the University who would sign the constitution and pay a slight initiation fee. Although the debates were well attended during this time, and much interest was taken in the society, it was felt by the officers that a restriction upon membership would have a beneficial effect. Accordingly, in April of 1885, a committee of five was appointed to revise the constitution. At the meeting held May 27 this committee made its report, and the constitution and by-laws as reported were adopted by the society.

During the year 1892-93, the Union was instrumental in arranging joint-debates between Harvard and Yale,—a form of contest which seems now to be a permanent feature.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

THE actual founder of the YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION of Harvard College, or the "Christian Brethren," as it is also called, was Eliphalet Pearson, Professor of Hebrew and other Oriental languages at Harvard. Under his patronage the Society was formed, December 11, 1802, declaring its purpose to be "the promotion of the growth of practical, experimental religion." This Society was known as the "Saturday Evening Religious Society in Harvard College." In 1819 a second society was organized with the same object in view, calling itself the "Wednesday Evening Society." On June 5, 1821, the two united under the name of the "Society of Christian Brethren in Harvard University." The Society now holds its meetings in Holden Chapel.

ZETA PSI CLUB.

THE Rho Chapter of the "Zeta Psi Fraternity" was founded in 1847. The Chapter existed as a literary society till 1857, when the Faculty put a stop to all the Greek letter societies. The Chapter was re-established in 1866; but was soon disorganized again. In 1882 the Chapter was organized in its present state by delegations from the University of North Carolina, Union College, University of California, Dickinson College, and the University of Pennsylvania. The Harvard members were from the classes of '82, '83, '84, and '85. For several years the Club had rooms over Wyeth's, on Brattle Street. In the spring of 1887, however, it removed to its present quarters.

INTERCOLLEGIATE TENNIS ASSOCIATION.

President, JOHN HOWLAND (Yale). Vice-President, W. A. LARNED (Cornell).
Secretary, R. D. WRENN (Harvard).

THE INTERCOLLEGIATE TENNIS ASSOCIATION held its first tournament at Hartford, in the spring of 1883. J. S. Clark, of Harvard, won the single championship, and together with H. A. Taylor, also won the doubles. In the fall of the same year another tournament was held, as it was found that this was the best time of the year for the event. Since this date all tournaments have been held in the fall. Harvard was again a winner in this second tournament, — H. A. Taylor winning the singles, and with P. E. Presbrey, the doubles.

In 1884 W. P. Knapp, of Yale, won the singles, and also the doubles, with W. V. S. Thorne as partner. Knapp won again in 1885, — both singles and doubles, — his partner being H. W. Shipman. This was the first year the tournament was held in New Haven, where it has remained ever since. G. M. Brinley, of Trinity, won the singles in 1886, while Knapp and Thatcher, of Yale, won the doubles. Harvard again won in 1887, — P. S. Sears becoming the singles champion, and winning the doubles with Q. A. Shaw, Jr. Sears won again the following year, but Hall and Campbell, of Columbia, won the doubles. R. P. Huntington, Jr., of Yale, won the singles in 1889, and Campbell and Wright, of Columbia, the doubles. F. H. Hovey, of Harvard, held the championship in 1890 and 1891; Chase and Shaw, and Hovey and Wrenn, all of Harvard, were the doubles champions respectively. This year W. A. Larned, of Cornell, won the singles, and R. D. Wrenn and F. B. Winslow, of Harvard, the doubles.

Ever since the intercollegiate tournament has been held at New Haven the balls have been donated by the popular sporting-goods house of Wright & Ditson, Boston; and nearly every winner has wielded one of their famous Sears' rackets.

THE old "President's Chair" is among the most ancient relics of the past now in the possession of the college, having been used for the purpose of conferring degrees on Commencement Day since the earliest recollections. It is said to have been brought to the college during the presidency of Holyoke, as a gift of the Rev. Ebenezer Turell, of Medford (the author of the "Life of Dr. Codman.") Turell was connected by marriage with the Mathers, by some of whom it is said to have been brought from England. Its variety are said to be common in the county of Cheshire, being "of wood, the seat triangular, the back, arms, and legs loaded with turnery, and carved and turned in the most uncouth and whimsical forms."

PROF. RAPHAEL PUMPELLY, Chemist National Board of Health, Newport, R.I.

From J. Heber Smith, M.D., Professor of Materia Medica for eleven years in the Boston University Medical School.

Boston, April 24, 1885.

DEAR SIR:— After many careful trials of the Simpson Spring Water in urinary disorders. extending over one year, I am convinced (despite my previous prejudices, excited by the extravagant claims made for Springs), that its properties are characteristic and as clinically trustworthy as are those of terebinthina, lithia, or many other of the partially proven drugs. I have found it surprisingly gratifying as an adjunct in the cure of albuminuria; and in lowering the specific gravity of the urine in Saccharine Diabetes its action is promptly and lastingly helpful. It is mildly cathartic and an active diuretic.

Professor of Materia Medica in Boston University Medical School.

WE have placed teachers in nearly every city and large town in New England.

Outside of New England we have supplied teachers to public or private schools in New York, Philadelphia, New Orleans, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Cleveland, San Francisco, and several smaller cities.

We have received applications for teachers from school officers from every State and Territory in the country and from a few foreign countries.

With two exceptions we have filled positions in every State and Territory in the United States.

In the Southern, Western, and Middle States we have filled several college positions.

AGENCY MANUAL FREE TO ANY ADDRESS.

NEW ENGLAND BUREAU OF EDUCATION.

Reasons why this Bureau has gained and deserves the confidence and patronage of so large a constituency of Teachers and School Officers all over the Nation.

1. Because it is the oldest Teachers' Agency in New England, having been established in 1876.
2. Because its manager for the last eleven years is a professional educator, and has become familiar with the condition and wants of every grade of schools, and the necessary qualifications of teachers.
3. Because the number of our candidates is large, and embraces many of the ablest teachers, male and female, in the profession.
4. Because all applications for teachers receive prompt and careful attention.
5. Because our pledge for fair dealing and devotion to the interests of our patrons has been redeemed.

TESTIMONIAL.

My Dear Dr. Orcutt :

Norwalk, Conn., Sept. 19, 1892.

Your letter of 17th Sept. is received. You are correct in supposing that I wished you to act for me and in my interests, as if you were the head of the school. The time was so short that I could not well do otherwise ; and allow me to add that I did so with entire confidence in the excellence of your judgment. Your experience has been such that I felt perfectly safe in putting the responsibility on you. I believe that there are other excellent teachers' bureaus, but I did not feel like putting a matter of so much importance to me wholly in the hands of ANY OTHER. If I had insisted on seeing the candidate or corresponding with him, I might have lost the opportunity to engage the gentleman whom you have selected, and been forced to take an inferior teacher.

I expect Mr. M——'s work will prove your judgment of him correct. His estimate of himself makes him strong where I am weak, and that is what I want.

Yours cordially,

E. H. WILSON.

IS one of the best conducted hotels in New England. Noted for its excellence and elaborate appointments, having been furnished throughout. Strangers, business men, and tourists will find it to their advantage to stop at THE QUINCY. Situated in the very heart of the city, two minutes' walk from Faneuil Hall. Near all principal points of interest. Horse-cars pass the door to depots and all parts of the city. The proprietors pride themselves on the reputation of the cuisine and table, which is the best in New England, everything being served on the most liberal scale.

THE QUINCY is the only hotel in Boston running its elevator all night. Mail collected and delivered at hotel every hour from 6 A.M. until midnight, a special service having been inaugurated by the proprietors, entirely independent of government delivery, affording quick service for all guests.

THE QUINCY HOUSE CAFE is noted for its English mutton chops, Welsh rarebits, and broiled live lobsters.

The only hotel in Boston running its own carriages. Fare to and from all depots 25 cents. Intending guests coming to Boston can write or telegraph in advance; carriages will meet them at depots.

NEW CAFE FIRST-CLASS CUISINE AND SERVICE AT REDUCED PRICES. Fifteen to thirty per cent lower than any hotel in Boston. The Quincy will also continue the American Plan, as hitherto. The splendidly appointed Private Dining-Rooms of the Quincy have long been famous for the convenience they afford family gatherings and small parties who desire to be served elegantly, apart from the noise and confusion of a public banquet hall.
